

Stories

The following cases are fictitious cases made up by the MEDA team. Whenever they are inspired by our own or others' real-life experiences or are inspired e.g. by news articles, we explain these sources. The cases are not meant to reflect reality in detail, as this is changing by the day. Rather, these stories try to circle around ethically relevant topics in an accessible way. Our aim is to motivate discussions and critical thinking about mHealth. We especially hope that they can provide useful material for teaching in ethics of mHealth.